

Coffee liqueurs add sophistication to cake and cream desserts. Try a dash on plain vanilla ice cream, or as flavoring for Bavarian Cream, or splash a bit on a plain angel food or pound cake. And, try making the liqueur at home. One reader offers a reference for recipes and says that the procedure is simple:

E.J.C. should get a copy of "Making Cordials and Liqueurs at Home," a step-by-step text that includes more than 75 recipes, by John P. Farrell. The book is available at large bookstores, and at the public library (in Riverdale, at least). I've made the raspberry cordial with great success and found it easy indeed.

COFFEE LIQUEUR

4 cups sugar

2 ounces instant coffee

2 cups boiling water

1 quart 100-proof
vodka
1 vanilla bean, broken in 4 pieces

Mix sugar, coffee and water. Stir until sugar and coffee are dissolved, over low flame. Put aside and cool. Put in glass jar or crock with lid, add vodka and vanilla bean. Stir every day, and let sit for three weeks.
